Campaign Signs are a cheap and convenient way of advertising for your party or group. Campaign signs can be displayed just about anywhere. Political signs are an excellent way to reach thousands or people in one easy step. A logo and colours should be selected early on in your campaign. Make sure you choose a font and colour where words are legible from a distance. Address one purpose instead of trying to fit multiple messages on one sign. Your name is the last thing you want them to miss seeing. The voters need to remember to whom they are voting. Make your name the largest word on the campaign sign.

Supporters of your party or group can put the campaign signs on their yard. These can be designed and purchased online at a reasonable price. In addition, you can surround the voting area with signs to help gain any last minute undecided voters. Think of how many people pass a certain area in one day or one week. Sticking with two or three colours throughout your campaign will help voters better associate you to your advertising methods.

You can distribute them on popular street corners around the town that you are running the campaign. They are light, easy to transport, and they stick in the ground or can be stuck to any surface. Moreover, they are produced in bulk so you will have plenty signs to spread throughout your area. Multiple that by the number of Campaign Signs you distribute and you can see just how effective political campaign yard signs are. A political campaign sign should include colours and texts in a bright and easy manner so that it can be read easily. Remember that passerby's have limited time to read your sign so you need to highlight and emphasize a single point for them to remember.
