When a nursing home abuse lawyer is needed

by Cumurciuc Andrea

Article published on January 6th 2012 | Law

Nursing homes are facilities were families can send their elderly members, when they feel like they cannot offer him the care and treatment he needs at home. Unfortunately some of the residence might experience the exact opposite of professional care, meaning abuse and neglect. Considering that most of them cannot or will not complain, it is the familyâ€™s responsibility to watch out for possible problems and take action if needed.

Signs of abuse

Nursing home residence are mostly vulnerable individuals who can face physical or emotional abuse and neglect. Certain signs of such a situation are obvious, while others might be hard to detect at the beginning. The most common signs include:

â€¢ Bruising, bleeding, burns, open wounds or cuts

â€¢ Sudden weight changes

â€¢ Poor hygiene

â€¢ Infections

â€¢ Unusual behavior

â€¢ Physical or emotional withdrawal

â€¢ Unusual financial transactions

â€¢ Disappearance of personal belongings

â€¢ Delaying access to visitors during regular time

Causes of neglect and recommended solutions

The main causes of nursing home neglect include the facts that employees often do not have proper training, are poorly paid and overwork. If a family member notices any suspicious signs concerning the care given to his relative he should speak with the manager of the facility. Unfortunately the management is often aware that a problem exists, but it does not operate necessary changes.

If the situation does not improve, families can file a complaint on behalf of a resident. They are also advised to contact a nursing home abuse attorney for legal advice. If they have a valid claim they can file a civil lawsuit and will likely receive financial compensations.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/law-articles/when-a-nursing-home-abuse-lawyer-is-needed.htm - Article Side

Cumurciuc Andrea - About Author:
For more information and legal advice about nursing home abuse in Sacramento area please contact a a Sacramento nursing home abuse attorney.

Article Keywords:
nursing home abuse, nursing home neglect, nursing home abuse lawyer

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!