Fans of Gucci handbags are also fans of its vintage styles. Gucci has been creating handbags since 1921 and a myriad of styles have evolved since then. Every Gucci handbag collection differs from the next but certain classic styles have been retained over the years. A lot of true blue fashionistas follow the latest handbag trends and sporting Gucci handbags of the vintage variety guarantees you that you won't be carrying the same designer handbags like everyone else.

The Vintage Style

When you say vintage you'll probably refer back to the times of the eighties but nowadays even the seventies and the years before are considered vintage. For instance a 1991 Gucci Hobo bag is very well considered vintage. The reason behind this is that the fashion industry changes styles every year and four for every season in a year. For a fashionista who changes her Gucci handbags seasonally, then a 1991 Gucci Hobo bag is definitely considered vintage. Only the true fashion enthusiast who see fashion as art care enough to keep last season's merchandise around.

But there is a very thin line between vintage and simply out of style and this is determined by real devotees of fashion.
