The Skyâ€™s the Limit for Bespoke Conservatories by

Cheryl Stevenson

Article published on December 20th 2011 | Gardening

Freed from their 80s stereotype, modern day bespoke conservatories come in all shapes and sizes

The 1980s was not a good decade for conservatory designs. Bespoke conservatories were practically unheard of in the residential market; and shoddy, white, â€˜off the shelfâ€™, uPVC conservatories dominated.

Jump forward three decades and the design horrors of that period are thankfully forgotten, or close to collapse. Today, bespoke conservatories are more popular than ever, thanks to their increasing affordability and versatility. Companies like Apropos specialise in designing and creating bespoke conservatories that bring Grand Designs living to properties across the whole country.

Apropos has a fine tradition of creating bespoke conservatories, and it is one endorsed by the Royal Botanic Gardens Kew. The spectrum of the companyâ€™s projects extend from new-build glazing projects costing hundreds of thousands of pounds, to small but stylish, lean-to, bespoke conservatories for terraced properties. The sky truly is the limit for bespoke conservatories when it comes to design and elegance.

So what types of designs are available for bespoke conservatories? Here is our low down on the options available for bespoke conservatories:

Lean-to bespoke conservatories

Lean-to bespoke conservatories are the most popular style of glass extension in the market today, but the unique design of each bespoke conservatory still provides plenty of individualism for clients. Lean-to bespoke conservatories can be situated either to the rear or side of properties, or run along the rear and side.

Reverse lean-to bespoke conservatories

Reverse lean-to bespoke conservatories are designed to maximise the feeling of space and light. The ridge of the conservatoryâ€™s roof is angled upwards away from the property, thereby allowing homeowners to walk into an increasingly larger bespoke conservatory. Lean-to bespoke conservatories are ideal for smaller properties or bungalows.

Link bespoke conservatories

Link bespoke conservatories are perfect for connecting separate buildings to create one larger living space. Furthermore, bespoke conservatories of this type are great for taking â€˜deadâ€™ space, such as unloved patio areas, surrounded on two or three side and making them usable again.

Orangeries

Orangeries are not bespoke conservatories, but a popular choice for bespoke extensions to period or listed properties. Thanks to their sturdy structures, orangeries merge seamlessly with the original properties.

Bespoke extensions

Bespoke extensions take their design influence from bespoke conservatories to house â€˜wowâ€™ factor kitchens, dining rooms, living rooms, or home â€˜hubsâ€™ that merge a combination of uses.

There simply isnâ€™t a glass ceiling to the designs that can be created for bespoke conservatories.

If you want to know more about Aproposâ€™ bespoke conservatories please visit www.apropos-tectonic.com or telephone 0800 328 0033.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/gardening-articles/the-sky-s-the-limit-for-bespoke-conservatories.htm - Article Side

Cheryl Stevenson - About Author:
To know more about a conservatories and how the skyâ€™s the limit for bespoke conservatories visit http://www.apropos-conservatories.com

Article Keywords:
conservatories, conservatory, bespoke conservatories

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!