Internet to SMS: New Way for Office Communications by Avena Sowell

Article published on March 16th 2012 | Communication

In this age of technology where people have learned to rely mostly on their smartphones and computers, many businesses have switched to more budget friendly ways of communicating with employees and clients by harnessing the advantages offered by email and text messaging.

No matter what the size of business, they can truly benefit from SMS technology and the web for their communication needs as it offers easier and faster ways to communicating. A CEO can send multiple text messages to his/her employees using his/her email account with a simple click of a button. A company can also send bulk SMS notices and advertisements to all their clients in one go. The advantages and uses are limited only by the imagination.

A company can have a lot of benefits in using email to SMS services in communicating with employees:

1. Faster message retrieval

Text messages are received instantly seconds after you send them. Since everyone has a mobile phone these days, you can be sure that your message was received by your intended recipients.

2. Improved attendance

Using text message to inform your employees of a scheduled meeting will improve their attendance as they will have no reason not to have received the information regarding the said meeting.

3. Automated scheduled alerts

Email to SMS services have options to configure automated alerts where bulk SMS can be sent to certain groups in a contact list in a scheduled time frame.

4. Improved communication

Internet to SMS services offers an efficient and extremely simple way to communicate with your employees. Whether they are out doing field work or somewhere within the building, you can be sure that they have received your message.

5. Improved productivity

As bulk SMS sending is easier and more cost-efficient than calling every single person, your staff resources can be used elsewhere.

6. Reduced cost

Bulk SMS can be sent at a fraction of the cost of mobile calls. Adding improved attendance and productivity, email to SMS services can save your company a fortune in communication expenses.

Text message is also beneficial in improving customer relations as you will be able to send alerts, notifications and announcements to all your clients. And as most people have cell phones and respond quickly to SMS messages, you will be able to reach your clients wherever they are. Communication has taken leaps and bounds because of such technological advancements and made the world shrink. Share all the good news without any penny with text via internet.

Internet to SMS services are now offered by numerous companies to businesses big or small. And while this service may be taken for granted as unimportant, it is vital for a business to acquire a reliable service provider to handle their email to SMS services.

A good internet to SMS service provider must have a guaranteed 100% gateway uptime to ensure that your messages will be sent and that they will arrive on time. They must also be able to provide SMS services to offices with staffs that donâ€™t have web access.

Get into the SMS way of communicating now and watch your companyâ€™s productivity soar.
