Every parent wants their child to read fluently. But they do not understand the importance of certain words which play an important role in English language. sight words are such words which cannot be spelled phonetically and are not easily represented by pictures. These words are the foundation of reading and a repeated exposure to them through listening provides an eventual connection to a personâ€™s brain concerning the letters for proper decoding of the spoken word. Most academic tasks are learned to the mastery level where the students can respond to the material on tests and quizzes after studying for a few days or weeks.

Learning to read is important so that a child can understand the meaning of the sentence being read out. Learning these words helps children build up confidence and gain fluency in reading. There are various games and activities which can make this word recognition both fun and entertaining. During the early stages of teaching, you can use the childâ€™s name and can later move on to other family names so that it gets easier for a child to learn the words as well as recognize them.

Students become efficient and confident readers with the ability to decode words that carry meaning to the text. Thus, a student reads to learn and not learns to read. These words also prove to be helpful for those children where English is not treated as a first language. There are various advantages of teaching these key words to young children. Professional educators use techniques which not only make teaching more fun but also develop a childâ€™s interest in learning.

If you see your child facing problems while reading then it is the right time to guide him. It is essential to create his interest in reading through the use of various games and activities so that he learns to recognize words automatically and can decode them while reading..
