Roger James Hamilton and What a Man Should Chase by Corwin Smith

Article published on December 17th 2011 | Success

Roger James Hamilton was really the only person who could have done it. And he did it with aplomb. He introduced the concept of wealth dynamics that threw light on the role that nature plays in the domain of wealth creation. He himself did not venture out to discover the theory that would be considered as the watershed moment in the entire world of wealth creation. One of the most important things that really matters the most is that he was the only person who had complete faith in the earlier system of wealth creation. And one failure after another led him to believe that the existing theory that governs the world of economics was full of faults and would never allow a smooth operation of economies around the world.

One of the most important things that led him on the path to discover a new system that would really improve the state of economies around the world was the frequent recessions that world economy was facing. And the system that he discovered proved that without acknowledging the role of nature in the art of wealth creation it is impossible to establish the most comprehensive system of wealth creation. And in order to explain this role that nature plays in the art of wealth creation Roger James Hamilton devised the theory of wealth dynamics that explicitly explains this role. According to the theory of wealth dynamics it is rudimentary that the human being first realizes the natural flow that exists within him.

In order to discover the natural flow of the human being Roger James Hamilton devised the personality test that is better known as the wdprofile test. This test is one of the most efficient of tests in the entire gamut of personality tests that are there in the fray. Once the individual has taken the test then he would be introduced to the real personality that he has. And once that personality has become clear to him, his path to the creation of wealth would be laid bare in front of him. And that path would be the profession that he would have to choose in accordance with the natural flow that had been discovered.

The theory of wealth dynamics is designed in such a way that after the completion of all the levels of the theory, the individual would become enlightened enough to know the difference between the manâ€™s chase after the wealth, and the chase of wealth after the human being. This is the biggest gift that Roger James Hamilton could ever have given to the people involved in the act of wealth creation.
