How to build an online presence? by Ajay Kumar

Article published on February 15th 2012 | Domains

Many people today plan to create an online presence, but are not too sure about the process. Setting up a website for your business has surely become a necessity today. There are a number of things that go into making a successful website. Today we will discuss about two main factors that make a website successful. Domain Registration and web hosting are the two factors that influence the success of any website.

The first thing a user needs is a domain name. Choosing the right domain name is very crucial and must be given a careful thought. Domain Name Availability is one of the most common problems a user faces when he is looking for a domain name. It is always suggested to think of a domain name that is not only one of its kind, but is also exclusive.

Several things go into choosing a domain name for a business website. If a user follows some simple basic steps, he can make sure that the website becomes immensely successful. When thinking of a domain that is meant for a business purpose, the user must pick a name that goes well with the business. It is always recommended to think of a domain name that has some relevance to the business you deal in. If you run a business that deals in car rental services it is advised to incorporate certain words like cars on hire, unless your business is already very famous and you can go with your company name.

There are several Domain Registration companies that enable its customers to Search for Domain availability. The user can also go ahead and Register a combination of Domain Names with different TLDs. Doing so will help the user in protecting his brand from any kinds of infringement.

Merely registering a domain name does not guarantee a user to get his website online. In order to have the website viewed by others on internet, it needs to be hosted on a server that is always connected to internet. Web hosting companies provide this service to its users. They basically allot server space and bandwidth to users so that they can upload web pages on the internet. There are several service providers offering an array of services, therefore it is necessary for a user to do some research so that he gets the best services. The research will enable the user to pick the most apt service provider.
