Sonoma County: Unique Outdoor Wedding Venues by Kindra Leomiti

Article published on March 9th 2012 | Weddings

Lately, there has been extensive media coverage of big celebrity weddings like that of Prince Williams and Kate Middleton, as well as Kim Kardashian and Kris Humphries. Although held in different continents, both weddings have certain things in common. One, they were well-planned. Two, they were beautiful. They are the kind of weddings that leave people wondering what it takes to pull them off.

Planning a wedding can trigger mixed emotions. Some view the lengthy process as very hectic, while others see it as very exciting. Thankfully there are wedding professionals out there who can lessen the burden on the couple. Wedding planners in particular can help the couple get in touch with caterers, musicians, designers, event stylists, and other people who can put wedding plans into action.

The process should start months before the day itselfâ€"there are some couples who even take a year or more to polish nuptial details. A lot of variables have to be factored in, such as the number of guests, the catering, the schedule of ministers or pastors, and of course, the venue. The latter is perhaps the second most urgent requirement in the entire process, next only to the date

One of the first questions a couple should ask when it comes to the venue is, â€œIndoor or outdoor?â€• An indoor wedding is always a sound choice because it is not as affected by the seasons as an outdoor wedding is. However, an outdoor wedding is worth some consideration for a spring or summer occasion

While quite a number of engaged pairs immediately think of the beach or the garden as the perfect spot for an outdoor wedding, residents of Sonoma County, California would suggest throwing a vineyard setting into the mix. This area, which is part of the stateâ€™s Wine Country, offers picturesque landscapes for spring or summer nuptials. There are a lot of interesting wedding venues in Sonoma that couples will get a kick out of touring.

Some of the wedding venues Sonoma has include the Sebastiani Vineyards and Winery, the oldest family-operated establishment of its kind. It is said to be a portal back to the age of royalty, which is definitely spot on because brides and grooms deserve to be the kings and queens on their wedding day. Other Sonoma venues that are worth looking at are the equally luxurious Cornerstone Gardens and Madrona Manor
