Interestingly, thereâ€™s a standard pattern a typical sub continental thinks about his educational prospects. Study in United States occupies the fore front among those prospects. There are of course reasons for United States to become so popular among student circles. There are reasons for this never ending manna about United States.

What transcends United States altogether into a different league? What probes students to pursue their study in US? Umm, there is one phrase that could answer all these riddling questions. â€œUnited States is the employment hub of the world.â€•

This aspect has always allured students to look at United States with respect and admiration. Studying in United States fetches them with priceless panorama of global exposure.

Itâ€™s in the early 90s the boom of education is US has started feverously among the Indian students. This can be accounted to the ever increasing awareness which saw its birth with the advent of globalization, foreign policies. Then flying across the globe became an ordinary affair. This is when the extravagance of education is US was identified and acknowledged by the rest of the world.

The phenomenal growth of US in terms of almost everything was very promising and it emerged as the sole source of world class education followed by unmatched explosion of employment opportunities.

Migration has begun and it is still on the cards. Students have started understanding the prominence of US in the global market and they have not been ready ever since to let go the prospect of Study in US to wind.

Nothing paces further only with a stemmed idea of studying in US. Itâ€™s about good universities the students must be in the pursuit of. This is where the student circles fall to the traps of educational consultants. With their beginnersâ€™ enthusiasm, they overlook key aspects in choosing a university and this is where devastation begins for students. Everything can possibly get messy from there.
