The early period of a childâ€™s age is the best time to teach them according to parentsâ€™ desire. That is the age when their mind accepts everything that comes their way and flexible enough. Though, it is also necessary to bring up the kids in an appropriate atmosphere in order to establish values in them. Added to this, care about small things should also be taken such whether the kids are mingling up with the right friends or not, what programmes are they watching in the Television, whether the locality they are staying is right for them or not. All these aspects have a direct or indirect impact on the behavior of the children.

Kids most of the times try to imitate their parents, so it is quite necessary for the parents to show good gesture so that the kids will try to follow their footsteps. There are numbers of simple values that can be established in the kids if parents implement elementary rules. For example, they can have set of rules that have to be followed by their kids such as Saying "please", "Thank you", talking softly when they are with others and smiling often when it is needed. To train a kid for with a positive attitude is not an easy task, but at the same time it is also true that every parent is concerned about the development of character of the kids.

It is a vital factor to praise the kids in order to foster positive behavior in them. A number of examples can be cited, when kids show good behavior, and that point of time the parents should definitely appreciate and make the toddlers feel special. It is a human nature that human beings love being appreciated; therefore, a small acknowledgement works as wonders in most of the cases. Let them understand the difference between good and bad behavior and also why good behavior is required. Parents should try hard to make them realize the outcome of being well-mannered. Trust is the other thing that parents should keep on their kids and also sometimes show it. They should not make their suspicious habit transparent, even if they have or not. It makes the children to rebel or to make a distance from their parents. By doing these only, children can be expected to learn all the etiquettes that their parents teach them.
