This coming May, the world will be ready for one of the biggest Formula One races in history. From the 11th to the 13th, the very best in the field will be congregating in Barcelona to vie for the pole position and emerge the champion of the day. If you are interested in witnessing this amazing event, you will need to plan everything out perfectly so that you can be immersed in the action as it is happening around you.

First, you will need to book your tickets at the event itself. The Montmelo circuit includes several locations from which to watch the race with prices varying to suit a number of budgets. Tickets range from around €45 to €400 depending on the view that you get and the demand of those particular seats. This means that you can then enjoy the race to the optimal level without having to worry about whether or not you can afford to go.

You will then need to think about where you are going to stay during the event. Remember that people from all over Europe will be travelling to Spain to witness the race, so you will need to book a hotel early. In this way, you can then confidently fly over to watch the Formula 1 Montmelo race safe in the knowledge that you will have somewhere to lay your head after the drivers have packed up and gone home each night.

And speaking of flying to the race, have you thought about how you will get there? Whether you catch a plane directly to Barcelona or fly through another city such as Madrid, again you will need to book early so that you can get to the race in time for the drivers to set off. With your plane tickets booked, you can then relax knowing that you can witness what promises to be one of the greatest races this year.

With all of this booked and planned for, you will then need to pack your bags with the right sort of gear. To show your support, you may want to wear a shirt, jacket or cap with the logo of your all-time favourite driver. One recommendation is bringing along some earplugs as the engine noise can actually be quite loud. This small addition may be enough to help you enjoy the day without suffering from any deafness as a result.
