Qualities that Make People Want SUVs by Keller

Article published on March 19th 2012 | Auto

Sport utility vehicles or SUVs are currently in vogue, capturing attention from both on-road and off-road travelers almost everywhere. When compared to other types of vehicles, SUVs have interesting features that make it fit to a wider range of travel needs, from towing or pulling capabilities to increased number of seats. There are several reasons why SUVs line up with vehicle types of choice by many Americans.

Pulling capacity

When the family has plans to go camping out-of-town, the first thing they should consider about the car they are taking is how much load capacity it has. A typical four-seat sedan with a pretty small compartment is not ideal considering the weight of stuff the group will bring in addition to their own weight. Excessive loading usually leads to accidents or delays due to burst tires or busted engine. An SUV offers both sufficient loading capacity for the passengers and pulling capacity for the teardrop.

Passenger seating

Many Americans love to travel with and friends especially on the holidays. Rather than driving two or more vehicles to accommodate all the passengers, they opt for a vehicle that can carry all passengers at once. SUVs have sufficient passenger seating that can accommodate up to 8 passengers.

Safety

Travelling is a lot enjoyable if the family feels safe and comfortable. Riding on an SUV makes passengers feel safer than riding in other smaller vehicles because of its large size and strong build. Although some cases of rollovers involving the early models have been reported, the modern SUVs offer safe journey both on- and off-road.

Off-road Capabilities

Most SUVs are designed with four-wheel drive systems that make driving on rough or slippery surfaces safer and more comfortable. The tires of SUVs are also designed with better treads to manage galloping over snowy or muddy surfaces. Khan Range Rover is a type of SUV that possesses the most desirable features distinguishing SUV from other vehicle types. It has a large seating capacity and over 2500 lbs. towing or pulling capacity.

Style

Aside from the aforementioned features, one good reason many Americans choose SUVs is because they like the style, and they come at reasonable prices. The design of an SUV like Khan Range Rover is not too classy for off-road trips nor too tacky for city journeys. It just has nearly everything a car owner would want in a car.
