Wellington boots are commonly known as wellie boots. This type of footwear can be purchased in almost any store today as they are widely used in the home or office. The homeowner may have a pair to work in the garden during the summer or to shovel snow off the driveway during the winter.

The office may require their onsite workers to wear wellie boots to protect their feet from being hurt by glass or sharp pieces especially in construction sites.

Hence, many stores carry many brands of wellie boots in various styles, sizes and colors. However, there are certain terms and conditions with wellie boots purchase.

Limited Supply

Some wellie boots are more popular than others. This is true on the more stylish and funky wellies. The production may not be as fast as its sales; hence, the limited supply of a particular brand or style of wellie may be frustrating for the consumer who desires to sport a pair or two.

Some wellie boots can make a fashion statement with their style and design; hence, they are very popular. These may come in various colors and designs which make them stand out among the other types of footwear.

Suppliers of wellies may not be able to guarantee the availability of the desired wellies. New styles of wellies may be manufactured in limited edition to check on the consumerâ€™s receptivity while old designs may not be manufactured any longer. Some diehards would find it difficult to get their favorite wellies after a certain season due to their discontinued production.

Alternatives

If the desired wellies are not available for some reason or other, good and responsible wellie suppliers would offer consumers an alternative; otherwise, a full refund would be made if payment is made. This can happen if the purchase is made online where full payment must be made prior to delivery of goods.

Other suppliers may assist in sourcing for alternative suppliers for the desired wellies. It could be that another branch or overseas associate may have stock of the wellie. Responsible wellie suppliers would go the extra mile to source for the desired wellies on behalf of their customers. This is part of their good service standard.

Payment

All wellies would have Value Added taxes which are remitted to the tax authorities by the suppliers. The best price for the desired wellie is always displayed for the consumerâ€™s benefit. Bulk purchases of wellies can be paid by any major credit card such as MasterCard, Visa, American Express and Discover.
