The Pros and Cons of Buy Here Pay Here Programs by Tyra Shortino

Article published on March 22nd 2012 | Auto

Buying a car requires a sizeable amount of money. People who are not financially stable will need help from banks and lending companies to assist them in getting one. Luckily, a lot of financial programs are now available in car dealerships to service cash strapped customers so they can finally have the chance to get a car. One such program is the Buy Here Pay Here program readily available in car dealerships in Indiana.

Despite the fact that this program can be the light at the end of the tunnel for financially challenged buyers, they should be cautious of some dealers who may take advantage of their situation. Since the program is seen as the most viable option for customers who have unfavorable credit standing, some unreliable car dealers can exploit them. If theyâ€™re not watchful, they can be set-up into strictly weekly or biweekly payment plans with astounding interest rates.

These arrangements are fine for some buyers who can afford it or whose car dealers are near their residences or place of work. If they miss a payment, they can drive to their car dealer and pay their dues. Otherwise, some car dealers attach a GPS on the car so they can track and repossess it if a buyer doesnâ€™t pay on time.

On the upside, it can provide buyers with unfavorable or no credit profile a chance to regain or have their credit standing. Dealers with Buy Here Pay Here lots in Indiana inform appropriate credit agencies of buyers with regular and prompt payments so their names are cleared from bad credit records.

Other Buy Here Pay Here Indianapolis Indiana car dealerships willingly assist buyers in choosing the cars available to them at the price and payment plan they can afford, and just ignore their bad credit evaluation. Some do not even require a credit check from them. However, buyers have to be cautious of such car dealers because they may not have a good credit reporting policy. This means the credit bureau is not notified of compliant buyers so they can get back their good credit profile.

Lastly, Buy Here Pay Here Indianapolis IN car dealers allow trade in of vehicles. This is a good option for customers who want to trade in their cars instead of paying for another. For prospective buyers, it is important that all these pros and cons are carefully weighed for them to arrive at the best and most realistic decision.
