World class airports in Moscow by Aron Howard

Article published on April 23rd 2012 | Travel Tips

Moscow is the capital of Russia and also surveyed to be the most populated city of the country. The city is a major centre of economics, politics, science, culture, finance, religion and transportation. It is a very rich city and in the recent past it has been surveyed as the home to 79 billionaires which left back the New York City behind in the record of the highest number of billionaires. The city is one of the most prominent and global cities of the world and is served by an extensive transit network which includes four international airports, one of the deepest underground tubes of the world, Moscow Metro and nine railroad terminals. Moscow metro is second in ridership after Tokyo which is the first. The city is characterized by the rich and varied architecture of its 185 stations. The city is well connected to the rest of the world by means of airways and a number of airlines operate in Moscow city. Plane tickets to Moscow can be booked online or manually. Ticket airlines can be preferably booked a considerable period before the travel to get a good deal.

Steremetyevo International Airport is the biggest international airport in Moscow Oblast, Russia. It is a major hub for the passenger operations of the Russian International Airlines Aeroflot and it is also one of the three major airports serving Moscow along with the other two airports named Domodedovo International Airport and Vnukovo. Steremetyevo International Airport is well-connected to the city of Moscow and there is express train connection serves as a connector to the airport. The roadways are also good connecting the airport ad it takes somewhere between 20 minutes to 2 hours from the city centre to reach the airport. The airport has excellent infrastructure and all modern amenities which make the air travelling of the passengers comfortable and memorable. Flights to Moscow are readily available from all other international airports of the world. If one is planning an economic trip, then there are a number of airlines which provide cheap flights to Moscow which can be availed readily.

The terminals at the Steremetyevo International Airport are state-of-art and have all modern amenities and facilities. The Terminal C is a relatively new one which was built at an estimated cost of US$87.7 million. This terminal is now a major terminal. The old Terminal 1 currently caters to mainly low cost flights and flights to Minsk. Cheap tickets to Moscow can be availed from a number of airlines that operate in Russia. The airlines that operate here range from the most luxurious to the most economic flights. Thus, travelling in Moscow is not always a very costly affair. A person can plan his trip all according to the size of his pocket.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/travel-tips-articles/world-class-airports-in-moscow.htm - Article Side

Aron Howard - About Author:
Aron Howard is an associate editor with Farebuzz.com. The website offers exclusive information related to a target_new first class flight and a target_new cheap tickets to Moscow.

Article Keywords:
beautiful city Moscow, Moscow holidays, travel to Moscow

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!