The Best of Handles and Knobs to Suit your Needs by Quentin Clark

Article published on April 18th 2012 | Babies

Handles and knobs are essential in making your doors function as they should and they also determine how attractive and stylish your door and home in general is. The good thing about the handles and knobs is that they comes in all styles and shapes and are made using different materials thereby making it easy for people to choose what they love best and what they feel will suit their needs.

Standard knobs and handles are mostly made using polypropylene material that is resistant to solvents and water. These are the more economical ones and they are preferred by most people. There is an also phenolic knob which is multi lobed and is mostly designed to resist high impact as a result of rubbing. These kinds of knobs will have a glossy finish and they are resistant to oil, greases and fuels. They are also resistant to thermal and electrical energy.

When looking for the best handles and knobs, you will find some which come with very soft grip. Even though they are soft, they provide a very firm grip hence can be used in most situations where such applications are necessary. Rubber overlay is mostly used to make the grip possible and the manufacturers are coming with new designs and development to ensure that all your requirements are met since different situations call for different kinds of handles and knobs.

Other kinds of handles you will find are clamping or indexing most recommended for confined spaces. They are more like socket wrenches which allow you into the right spaces and they are also available in soft touch meant for heavy duty use. Drawer pulls, bridge handles and some of other handles you will find in the market. They all come in different styles and you will need to choose the best in relation to the need that you have.

Since not many people know which handles or knobs are best to go for in their situations, it could help to use the help of professionals. You can find a reputable dealer to help with the selection of the best handles and knobs to suit the kind of situation that you are in. You will be amazed at the many options available for you and in the need you will manage to find the most appropriate in function and appeal in relation to your preferences.
