Amber may be a good selection for making ornaments by Jamesbond

Article published on February 21st 2012 | Business

This is an era when people want unique and delicate items and women have a special propensity for having sublime items this is why different kinds of stones and items are being introduced in market for making ornaments. Gold and silver have been very famous among women for making jewelry but some of the women consider that they should try something very different so that their special taste could be established in society. Amber is a material that is mistaken as stone by many and is being used in ornament industry. Ornaments made by this substance look very beautiful and are very expensive.

Amber is a substance that is organic in nature and it is made from fossil tree resin. There are many types of amber and some of them are quite solid in shape this is the reason for popular misconception about them as stone. Amber is known in every region and continent of the world and people from Europe to Asia and Middle East to India use this substance in one form or the other. Amber is used for medical purposes in many countries and it has a very old history of being used as a chemical substance for medical purposes. People in B.C. knew only the medical purpose of amber and it is still used in traditional medicines of china for this purpose. Notwithstanding amber is also used in several other countries for medical purposes as healing agent for wounds but Chinese culture has a special significance for this substance.

Amber is also used in perfumes and many companies use amber in their perfumes for giving a strong odor to their products. Besides being used as ornament, use of amber in perfumes in also common in Europe and many countries of Western Europe like France have a good market for the purchase of amber. In china, smoke of amber is also used for either medical purposes or keeping the insects away. Amber is also used for preserving different insects because it is quite transparent in nature and insects preserved in it look very beautiful. We may see amber in many museums around the world where different things are preserved in them.

Amber can be molded in many shapes and substances and we may witness various uses of this substance. It may be used for making rings and earrings. Besides, different kinds of jewelry like bracelets can also be made by this substance and it is used mostly with silver because using this substance in silver enhances the beauty of ornaments many folds. Amber is different from many other substances because we find most of the substances cold on touching but amber gives somewhat warm feeling on touching. Amber should be kept away from fire and oxygen because when exposed to oxygen, amber oxidizes. Last but not the least, ornaments made by amber should be kept with great care and they should be washed with due precautions because it is bad to wash amber with a number of detergents.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/amber-may-be-a-good-selection-for-making-ornaments.htm - Article Side

Jamesbond - About Author:
Find the perfect cognac a amber teething necklace or the perfect multi color a amber teething necklace today!

Article Keywords:

amber teething necklace,amber teething necklace

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!