Create Unique and Innovative Jewellery Using Crystal Beads by James Blee

Article published on June 16th 2012 | Business

Crystal beads or glass beads have the lustre and sparkle of diamonds but at the fraction of the cost. Crystal beads create a lasting impression and make you stand out from the crowd due to the eye catching and sparkling nature of crystal beads. Crystal beads, especially clear crystals, reflect the light causing the crystal beads to sparkle or shine. With the demand for individuality and creativity in the jewellery and fashion world, the variety of crystal beads on the market has grown dramatically over the years resulting in many individuals creating their own jewellery range for either personal or commercial use. Crystal beads are readily available in all art and craft stores and online retailers as beading your own jewellery is a popular hobby or craftsmanship. The crystal beads have a small inconspicuous hole that allows you to loop multiple beads on to a single bracelet or necklace and this practice of creating your own unique design has been accelerated due to the fashion charm bracelets that is popular amongst all ages from young children, teenagers to young and mature adults.

The appeal of charm bracelets could stem from the excitement of finding and collecting different crystal beads and other charms for your bracelet. Crystal beads look great when attached to silver jewellery as well as bohemian style leather straps or plastic or metal wire. Swarovski crystal beads tend to have more surfaces or facets to reflect on resulting in enhanced sparkle and shine on the crystal beads. Swarovski crystal beads are becoming increasingly popular on non jewellery items such as wedding or occasion wear dresses and veils, home accessories such as chandeliers cushions candleholders photo frames vases stationary, toasting flutes and glasses, shoes and handbags, invitations and many more. Crystal beads come in a variety of colours such as pink green yellow blue red black crystal beads, shapes and sizes. Despite the variety of crystal beads on the market, clear crystal beads or glass beads is still one of top selling colours as they can easily be mistaken for diamonds and add a touch of sophistication to any outfit or home.
