Most of us want to share a proportion of our wealth with the needy. Despite the innate desire to serve humanity, work pressure and commitments in personal life often force us to relegate the noble task. However, our procrastination extends the suffering of the poor who desperately need the help of the privileged to reduce their distress. Hence, if you have postponed your decision to serve the destitute, it is time to reconsider your decision and donate now.

How your donation can help others

Despite improvement in job opportunities and national incomes, according to a latest World Bank report, around 1.2 billion people in the world live in extreme poverty. Along with governments and international organizations, even the common person can volunteer to help others survive. Therefore, donate now to a charity that works on behalf of thousands of people who have vowed to improve the quality of life of the helpless souls of the planet.

Donate now to improve health care facilities

Poor health is a consequence as well as cause of poverty. Poverty forces people to live in unhygienic conditions without access to clean drinking water and proper sanitation, making the unprivileged people vulnerable to illnesses. Moreover, lack of fund to meet medical expenses deprives a person of necessary treatment. Poor health inhibits income generation activities of a person, further worsening the financial woes. The goal of charitable organizations is to build a strong health care system for the poor, through, which the economically disadvantaged section of the society can access free health care. If you donate now and inspire others to donate to an organization that works for the improvement of the health sector in the poor countries, you can give these poor people a new lease of life.

Donate now for education

Education can protect a person from human degradation created by poverty. Education can also alleviate poverty. While education is the right of every human, according to the United Nations, about 113 million children in the underdeveloped countries do not have access to primary education. Donate now to a charity that helps in educating the poor and awards scholarships to poor meritorious students, and help the unprivileged live with dignity.

Donate now for improving environment

Environment degradation often plays a role in exacerbating poverty. Absence of clean drinking water sources is a major concern in the poverty-stricken regions. Exploitation of groundwater sources is increasing arsenic poisoning in these areas. Your donation can help an organization design awareness programs that can improve the quality of life of the poor.
