Article published on December 30th 2011 | Business

Death and injury are two malefic events which have the capacity to alter lives of people. Accidents can happen anywhere, be it a workplace, home or on roads and itâ€™s definitely not possible to avoid the inevitable. Such occurrences often take lives of victims or at least hamper the mobility of the person/persons concerned.

In such cases the Government takes up action to provide the victims with financial and medical aide. The federal Government has provisions for the disabled. Social security disability is designed for all irrespective of any age limit.

In most cases the working and the young population are subject to unforeseen events causing injuries or death. Yes the Government has provisions for young people who are blind or having limited mobility; they easily qualify under social security disability programs. Managed and controlled by the Social Security Administration the program is set to benefit the individual with financial and medical support. However this program is slightly different from Supplemental Security Income which depends on the income of the disabled; the social security benefits are given to the disabled irrespective of their age or any income group if they ever belonged to.

For Disability social security the holder of the benefit doesnâ€™t have to belong to a particular income threshold. The benefits of SSD pertaining to the age group of the disabled are discussed in the following lines:

If you are an elderly person who has retired from job and whose age ranges 63-67 years, then you are eligible to receive certain amount from the Government itself provided you have reached the retirement age officially. Even if you are 62 years old, the SSD entitles you to receive an amount that is lower than the usual one (for people having attained an age of 63-67 years). The cut can go up to as high as 30%.

Being an adult who is subject to mental or physical disability due to an injury or a terminal disease your name will be enrolled under the SSD program. You will be given a certain amount of money as financial help from the government itself. However, you are enrolled to the program once you can prove that your physical or mental abilities donâ€™t support you to work and earn.

If you are a disabled and is unable to earn your bread, then your children are entitled receive an amount that is equivalent to half of what you earned when you were healthy. Disability social security also entitles a disabled child to get financial support.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/facts-on-social-security-disability.htm - Article Side

Safinajones - About Author:
Safina Jones is a legal advisor who has good information on a social security disability.For more information on a Disability social security, please visit a http://www.consumerlawfirmcenter.com/

Article Keywords:
social security disability, Disability social security

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!