As a result of the new safer and higher quality re-manufactured products the issue of toner cartridge recycling is becoming much more influential in the industry than ever before. Lately, toner cartridge recycling has become a hot topic on the internet and in the printing supply industry as a whole, not only for the environmental impact that it has but also for the chance that the resulting re-manufactured competition may result in driving down the exorbitant prices of new brand name companies.

If you invested the money in buying a laser printer there is a decent chance that you may be looking to print out quite a few pictures or graphic-heavy printing jobs that would require a brighter and more finely ground toner than what you would use if you only planned to print your homework and essays for college.

While the prices of new ink cartridges is increasing these days everyone is trying to find the most effective ways to reduce the amount of ink they use and extend the life of their cartridge for as long as humanly possible. Very few people can afford to spend enough money on ink to buy their printers several times over each year, so in the interests of encouraging people to save money and conserve resources here are several helpful tips to help extend the life of your ink cartridge.

It is also important to only print off exactly what you are looking for on a page and exclude anything unnecessary. If you only want a paragraph from a page, use the copy and paste function to print only that paragraph and don't waste ink on everything else it may also be worthwhile to manually reduce the density of your print jobs in the "Advanced" tab on your control panel.

Here are some crucial tips to make your printer ink cartridges last longer.

- Avoid chunky fonts and bold

- Use a smaller font size

- Proof Before You Print

- Print Just What You Need

- Use print review

Used cartridge recycling is also an easy way to create cash for trash for your empty toner cartridges and empty inkjet cartridges. Some companies do toner cartridge recycling by cash. Small businesses especially benefit when getting paid for their used printer inkjet and toner cartridges at Staples, Office Depot, and OfficeMax stores.

Various companies offering toner cartage recycling for cash online. But be aware that you may be victim of some kind of fraud. Be careful and provide your personal information only to reputable organizations. Many websites encourage you to collect your cartridges and of your friends and turn those into cash and you are free to make your donations to the charity of your choice.
