ISO actually has its origin in the Greek word Ã•SOSâ€• that means equal. Today it has come to mean the International Organization for Standardization that has its origin in 1926. The initial organization then was the International Federation of the National Standardizing Associations (ISA) that was disbanded in 1942 on account of WW II but later reorganized under its current avatar ISO. ISO is a voluntary organization and most of its work is handled by 2700 committees and working groups. Today there are 18,500 International Standards on a large number of subjects while each year sees the addition of 1100 new ISO standards. The complexities of such a huge range of standards have given rise to several professional bodies that offer guidance on ISO standards. These are known as ISO consultants.

There are different categories of ISO consultants depending on the subjects and the areas of specialisation they handle. Some consultants have taken up the niche sector of business management systems as their area. These consultants therefore provide ISO training for internal auditors and managers as well as others that wish to know more about international quality standards in management. The ISO services offered by these consultants include ISO Certification Consulting, ISO Online Training and ISO Improvement Consulting.

The group of ISO consultants guides businesses through the process for ISO certification procedures with the ultimate objective being the ISO certification. The group also helps the smaller manufacturing companies in the search for grants that will reduce the cost of ISO implementation. The various services related to ISO consulting include standards such as ISO 9001 QMS, 14001 EMS. 27001, 50001, OHSAS 18001, AS 9100, R2 and R2/RIOS EHMS. Similarly in the area of ISO Training as well as ISO online training, the ISO services offered pertain to standards that include the above.

The ISO services provided by the group include the area of improvement consulting. Therefore whether you already have a business system management or you have a need for someone to help you put one together, the group can guide you in carrying out an improvement of ISO business system practices. The group can also help in the improvement of efficiency as well as quality.
