LTS Supply knows screws and fasteners for construction jobs. Those employed with the company are experts in the field and can tell you in thorough detail the difference between a self-tapping screw and a deck screw or concrete screw. They know when and how you should use stainless steel screws as opposed to screws made of other materials. There are special screws for chipboards and particle boards, and for those materials, you should not use the same self-tapping screw or other type of fastener as you would with wood or drywall. If you know you need to fasten materials in your project, yet you donâ€™t know exactly where to begin, consult with and purchase from LTS Supply for the best service out there. Itâ€™s something rare that a company dedicates its entire focus just to screws. This specificity makes LTS into true experts.

Our self-tapping screws are used for fastening wood, metal, or other materials into concrete or masonry. They are sometimes even used in medical surgeries. They are a very common type of screw, and very useful, therefore, as well. We are not so short-sighted as to leave you incomplete, however. LTS offers the extensive selection of nuts and bolts, washers, and pins, cap screws, and keys. Thereâ€™s more, too, but youâ€™ll have to come online and search our database to know it all. The website is extremely user-friendly and will allow you to quickly and efficiently look through the supplies we offer and make your decisions or decide what questions you need to ask in order to make that decision. You can be sure youâ€™ll leave with what you need, confident to begin your fastening project. You can be sure youâ€™ll know where to go if you find you need more stainless steel or self-tapping screws, socket screws, or set screws, too. We have the screw for you.
