Luxurious Adirondack Chairs: Comfortable & Elegant by Julia Roger

Article published on June 1st 2012 | Business

Adirondack Chairs were generally meant for rural settings where one could leisurely pass time sitting on these chairs and watching the beauty of the countryside. It was designed by Thomas Lee in the year 1903. He was on a vacation to the Adirondack Mountains and was not satisfied with the seating arrangements. He designed and built this special outdoor chair for his summer home. Since, it was developed at a place in these mountains it derived its name from there. The original ones had eleven pieces of wood cut from a single board with a straight back and seat. It also featured an arm rest.

However, the modern ones have a rounded back and a countered seat. In this age these are no longer restricted to the country side. In fact, one will find these special chairs present in most cafes. If one is looking at seating arrangements in the backyard of homes then these are a good alternative. With a long armrest one can relax and interact with the birds that tend to pass by. Food and other beverages can also be kept on the armrest.

However, if there is a need to have seating arrangements for more than two people, one can look at the concept of a Park Bench. These benches are normally sighted at the local park. These benches are made of various materials such as wood or aluminum. However, the outdoor is a place, which is left to the mercy of nature. Hence, if one is on the lookout for something, which are durable then it is better if one opts for benches, which are made of recycled plastic. One can also have a look at plastisol coated benches if they need to be strengthened and made weather resistant. If one is on the lookout for quotes they are very cheap when compared to the comfort they offer.
