Printing Nimble, Printing Quick: Printers that help the Budget Stick by Philip Carey

Article published on March 7th 2012 | Business

The firm that's the best in the business is usually the same one that knows the business best. CMYK printers, catalog printers, or magazine printers in Florida are no different. Say you've been in business for a while yourself, and you've already established relationships with ink and paper suppliers, printers, graphic designers, and other relevant suppliers and service providers. Are you certain you're getting the best value for your dollar from each of these relationships? Is it time to try a new graphic design firm? Or might it be beneficial to consider switching to a new printer, perhaps? Is there any way you could be reducing your average print cost per sheet? How about something as mundane as postage and handling? Are you paying more or less than the industry average? What about the ink itself?

As with so many aspects of running a successful business, the more information you have the better equipped you are. But gathering that information can be time-consuming and tedious and "in today's volatile print market with rapid price fluctuations" the information goes out of date quickly. There are hundreds of magazine printers in Florida alone. Researching the work and prices of the many different CMYK printers could take more time than you have.

Today is an exciting and challenging time in the printing industry, and you'd be wise to take advantage of it. Prices vary immensely from firm to firm, and many magazine printers in Florida are being acquired by larger firms, which only serve to increase the overall confusion. There are currently distinct disconnects between prices and demand for printing services. Getting your printing job done economically and with a minimum of fuss definitely comes down to identifying the right CMYK printers for your specific project. It might even be a different printer for each project!

This is where a print broker like CMYK Print Solutions (www.cmykprintsolutions.com) can be exceptionally helpful. A print broker will do all of the research on various print houses for you, and work to find the best CMYK printers and magazine printers in Florida. They'll match your specific print job and budget to the printer with the most complementary services and cost structure. Many print brokers won't even charge you for this service. They are, instead, paid a fee by the printer you end up selecting, so there's never any cost to you. This is not the case with every print broker though, so make sure to ask for cost clarification prior to hiring a broker.
