Article Side
Secure Your Future: Social Security Disability Benefits by AGLawNYC

Article published on June 21st 2012 | Business

Secure your future with Social Security Disability benefits. If you have recently been subject to a disability or illness, you may qualify for a Social Security Disability benefits.

If you have worked in jobs covered by Social Security and have a medical condition that meets Social Securityâ€™s parameters for disability, you may be entitled to monthly cash benefits. A Social Security Disability Law Firm can help you discern whether or not you are qualified to receive such Social Security disability benefits. A starting point in determining if you are applicable is to conclude that you are unable to work for one year or more due to a disability. If this is the case, you may be eligible for Social Security benefits.

As a Social Security Disability Law Firm would inform you, you must have worked long enough and recently enough to qualify for Social Security disability benefits. The US government uses a â€œcredit systemâ€• dependent upon your total yearly wages or your self-employed income in conjunction with your age to decide if you are eligible. Additionally, your condition must interfere with primary work-related activities for your claim to be considered. Your claim may not be approved, however, if you are able to adjust to a different line of work given your education, past work experience, and acquired skills.

If you believe you are qualified given the above-mention criteria, a Social Security Disability Law Firm can assist you in streamlining your claim with the Social Security Administration. This will start with the filing of your application by the Social Security Disability Law Firm on your behalf. The application process includes the Application for Benefits and the Adult Disability Report Form. The Social Security Disability Law Firm will ask you questions about your case, such as the current medications you are taking, a summary of where you worked and the type of work you did, and the names of the hospitals you visited along with the dates of those visits.

Since you must provide this personal information to the Social Security Disability Law Firm, it is critical that you are comfortable disclosing the information to the firm and your attorney. Disability claims can take a long time to process, ranging from three to five months, so it is critical that you have good communication with the Social Security Disability Law Firm throughout the duration of your case. Remember, you should begin the application process as soon as you become disabled.

Angiuli and Gentile, LLP is a full-service law firm based in the New York metropolitan area. The firm has built its reputation around the belief that the motto â€œWeâ€™ll take it from hereâ€• provides clients w exceptional level of trust and confidence in the firmâ€™s team of dedicated lawyers. The Angiuli and Gentile, LLP team has done just that while representing countless Social Security Disability claims. The firmâ€™s Social Security Disability division has helped clients file and secure their Social Security claims for the last two decades.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/secure-your-future-social-security-disability-benefits.htm - Article Side

AGLawNYC - About Author:
about Angiuli and Gentile, LLP, and to learn how their experienced team can help with your next Social Security Disability claim, log on to www.AGLawNYC.com.Angiuli and Gentile, LLP has a history of exceptional client service. For more information

Article Keywords:
Social Security Disability Law Firm

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!