Article published on April 19th 2012 | Business

This age is one of technology. When laying out your marketing strategy, you need to look at different ways of promoting your marketing. The technology savvy youth of the market are sure to appreciate marketing campaigns that involve promotional flash drives. However, you need to know how to get the good ones.

Once you have settled on the style of the device from the thousands available on the market, got the logo done right and finalized the artwork and print, itâ€™s time to focus on the actual promotion and distribution as well as working to improve the value of the product in the eyes of the consumers.

Presentation is something that is very important most of the suppliers of flash drives will provide them wrapped in bubble wrap. Now this ensures that the devices are safe during transit but you need to take them out before distributing them. If you want packaging on your product â€“ask for it. The basic boxes usually come free even as theâ€• premium packagingâ€• can cost you some.

To enhance the value of your promotional product in the eyes of the consumer, add accessories like key rings and lanyards to the drives.

When you order the promotional USB memory sticks, be sure to keep a day or more in hand before the delivery and the actual distribution. This prevents any last minute mess-ups and gives you time to fix any messes. As a general rule of thumb, keep ten working days for the printing of the drives. When you are selecting a supplier, be sure to check in on his history. A number of â€œsuppliersâ€• vanish after promising to provide the required number of products in a week. Make sure to ask for referrals to cross check their claims. Last but not the least; do not let the cheap drives hinder your promotion!
