This USB Voice Recorder is definitely one piece of spy gear that you should consider. This two-in-one flash drive and recording device that makes your audio recording discreet and you can record up to 40 â€“ 320 hours of audio. Remember the old days when your only option was that crappy cassette tape recorder? Now youâ€™ll be able to hold a massive amount of audio in a small flash drive that fits right in your pocket! Whether in a library or at school, conversations and lectures are now able to be captured on this cool little tool. With memory able to capture up to 40 hours of audio (and a massive 160 hours with the upgrade), you will never miss an important event. This wireless USB is your very own audio recording system at the easy flick of a switch.

The most common hardware computer spy gadget that you can get hold of is a keylogger. This device is connected between the computer and the keyboard. As the user types anything on the keyboard, such as emails, documents, passwords, etc, they are stored on an internal memory storage device within the keylogger. The owner of the keylogger can then retrieve the data from the keylogger at any time.

There are 3 main types of hardware keylogger available. There is the PS/2 model, which has the same fittings as a standard PS/2 keyboard. There is also the USB model, which is compatible with all modern keyboards. The third type of keylogger is one concealed within the computer keyboard itself. This is the ultimate in stealth as its very unlikely that a user would regularly unscrew their keyboard to see if a keylogger has been installed inside it. Keylogging devices can also work with some wireless keyboards as long as the keylogger fits between the computer and the USB keyboard receiver.

Hardware keyloggers are excellent for quick installations, but you do need physical access to a PC to install it. You also need physical access to the PC when you need to retrieve data from the logger

Plug & Play Technology â€“ Easy Review & Transfer On Any Computer This voice recorder is a USB drive so you can quickly plug into any computer and upload and email your recordings. No software to install. Perfect for the busy student who canâ€™t miss a note. All your classes can easily be transferred to your computer.
