The maintenance of a classic or a period car is more akin to a ritual than anything. Owners are known to spend hours lavishing time and attention on their prized possessions. They also scour the world, looking for parts that would keep their wheels running in fine fettle. They are known to discuss all things automotive in relation to their vehicles and are among the more knowledgeable people on this planet.

The ownership experience, when one has a classic car, has a charm of its own. Doors are opened for such owners at places where owners of some of the more swanky set of wheels would struggle to gain entry. Often called a gentleman's hobby, it is a bug whose bite is known to last for life. Such owners of classic or period cars believe in using their rides on a regular basis; mostly on the weekends. On weekdays though, they stick to more modern machinery that just about gets the job done.

But perhaps, the one thing that most owners of such cars dread is the weather. When the elements begin their annual ritual and become hostile towards such delicate pieces of machinery, most owners start to fret. Worried about the safety of their vehicles, they are constantly on the lookout for solutions that will keep their cars out of harms reach.

Many such owners turn to self storage or personal storage facilities that help keep their prized possessions safe. Most facilities however, are not fully equipped to handle the specific needs of classic car owners. Classic cars by virtue of their description belong to a bygone era. The fabrics, upholstery, metal work and paint surface have weathered along for a significant part of their lives. As a result, they are more susceptible to changes in the environment. Fluctuations in the ambient temperature and high humidity levels found at most conventional storage operators in Kuwait can cause untold and unrecoverable damage to these priceless classics.

Storage Kuwait is a leading name in the Kuwaiti storage segment. The dedicated vehicle storage solution offers special climate controlled storage facilities that are of particular utility to classic car owners. Here, temperature and humidity levels are monitored continuously. Care is taken to ensure that they are maintained at optimum levels. The other customized storage solutions on offer under this category are: boat storage, bike storage, quad storage and Jet Ski storage.
