Space is an absolute necessity anywhere in this world. By space, it is implied the necessary space to operate efficiently. Being concerned with office spaces and factory spaces, the problems of allocating space and the solutions is brought under discussion here. The offices and manufacturing units of today are facing such a problem, which is that of space. As manufacturing units increase production capacity, it is absolutely essential to increase storage space at the same time. However, new and innovative thinking has led to the solution to this problem, in the form of storage shelving is the usage of wall shelves, free standing shelves, bulk shelves and various other types of shelves to combat space shortages.

Storage shelving believes in using up space that is vertical rather than using space that is horizontal. Thus, workspace is increased, since workers and employees have a larger space to move about and continue their activities. A free and open surrounding is much better for employee morale than an environment of stuffiness and literal suffocation. This system is even applicable when it comes to residence, homes and apartments. People can utilize the wall space to exhibit whatever they want to, be it paintings or just any other curio. Thus, it also aids in interior designing.

A secondary aspect of storage shelving is long span shelving. This system is applicable only in warehouses and other large storage spaces. Since it applies wall shelves or standing shelves that are not just a few feet long but whole yards long, it isnâ€™t very practical for houses. Long span shelving is typically used by manufacturing units that have a high production turnover per day and require a large storage space, where they can store and stow away all raw and produced products for safekeeping. These shelves are huge, in terms of size, being of multiple levels and thus are ideal for large companies.
