The Inside Truth About Wholesaledeals Scam by Brad Smith

Article published on January 3rd 2012 | Business

If you have come across reports about wholesaledeals scam, thereâ€™s really no need to push the panic button. Thousands of registered members also have come across these scam reports but they are not bothered in the least because they know the real inside story. The fact is that wholesaledeals is the largest online wholesale trade directory in the UK. In a short period of time the portal has emerged as the preferred location of trade buyers and suppliers because of the various trading advantages and features it offers.

There is absolutely no truth in wholesaledeals scam reports. It is a well-orchestrated campaign by trade competitors most of whom have dubious background or are downright scammers. The scam rumors are being spread in a desperate attempt to somehow tarnish the growing reputation and popularity of wholesaledeals. It is now clear that the move is backfiring because retailers and suppliers are thronging to register with wholesaledeals in large numbers every month to take advantage of the advanced trading opportunities available with the portal.

â€¢ Enhancing the Trading Experience of UK Traders

Wholesaledeals started operations in 2004 offering direct sale of wholesale products consisting of mainly gadgets and electronics for eBay powersellers and small and medium retailers. Their role as an online trade directory service started in 2008 when they set out to use their expertise and knowledge to make a difference to the wholesale market scene in the UK. The endeavor was to make it easy for trade buyers to locate reliable suppliers and quality products easily. That attempt quickly found favor among the UK trading community who were tired of being taken for a ride by scammers and middlemen and of course, fake dropshippers.

Far from being a wholesaledeals scam as they are made out to be, the portal is actually playing the policeman trying to hound out all acts of deceit and cheating thatâ€™s spreading rampantly on the UK ecommerce scene. The fear of exposure and the thought of having to close down their scam sites are primarily responsible for the rumors of wholesaledeals scams getting louder.

â€¢ Verified Wholesalers Mitigate Scam Risks

The portal has made it easy for online resellers to find profitable products without risking doing business with unconfirmed sources. All the suppliers and dropshippers listed on wholesaledeals are verified for their authenticity. They have to submit to the stringent verification processes before they are allowed listing on the trade wholesale directory or dropship directory. This ensures that you donâ€™t end up in the clutches of conmen and lose money in the process.

The portal offers some truly fantastic trading tools such as the Wholesale deals Deal Tracker. It is a quick and guaranteed way of finding the latest deals available from established and reputable dealers on the site. The Deal Tracker can be used to calculate your actual margin of profit based on the minimum order, cost of transportation and import duties even before you actually order the deal. It does take some imagination to bill such a user-friendly trade portal as wholesaledeals scam.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/business-articles/the-inside-truth-about-wholesaledeals-scam.htm - Article Side

Brad Smith - About Author:
The rumors about a wholesaledeals scam do not cut ice with the registered members of the portal or regular traders. Scammers are using the a wholesaledeals scams ruse to target newcomers to ecommerce. They just want to create doubts in the minds of new resellers.

Article Keywords:
wholesaledeals scam, wholesaledeals scams

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!