The Truth About Online Esources Scam Reports by Brad Smith

Article published on February 4th 2012 | Business

Esources scam reports are doing rounds at some online portals. But, the question is, how true are they? Is the leading UK directory really involved in any scam?

Esources is a reliable wholesale directory that provides you with the required resources for your e-commerce business. Fake esources scam reports are being circulated by some of its competitors who are unhappy with the rising popularity of Esources and want to dent its reputation.

Another question that some traders ask is whether esources scam reports have affected the business of this directory. Are traders shying away from registering with esources.co.uk? The false esources scams rumors have not at all affected esources. It is still adding thousands of traders to its member base every month. There is no drop in its traffic, and it is doing brisk business.

Despite all these scam rumors, Esources is undeterred. It is completely focused on providing the best services to its members just like before. The company understands the needs of traders and works hard in order to fulfill them. It knows that the main problem of traders is how to locate reliable suppliers and procure supplies at competitive rates. Therefore, it works hard to unearth the best product sources. All the wholesalers in its database are verified. This ensures that esources.co.uk, the trading platform, remains scam free.

Esources not only connects traders and helps them in sourcing suppliers, but it also provides you several other resources to facilitate you in running your e-commerce business efficiently. It gives you information about the latest and most profitable dropship deals, tips on how to build a successful retail store, information to improve your knowledge on various aspects of the retailing business, and industry news. It informs you about trading events in time so that you can take part in them in order to improve your business prospects. Not only this, but the directory provides you with a market research wizard that helps you know the selling potential of different products, decide which key words to use, and finalize the product mix for your business. Esources offers so many benefits that even thinking that esources is involved in any kind of scam is absurd.

Reviews by real users say that esources has helped retailers build great and successful businesses. All reports about esources scams are false, and you should not pay attention to them. If you want to gain an edge over your competitors, you should register with this directory in order to get all the latest and important information first and to get access to accurate and reliable data about suppliers and products.

Esources has free as well as paid memberships. A free membership gives you limited benefits, but it is a great way to start your association with the directory and check how it can benefit you. Once you upgrade to premium membership, you will get several benefits including an unlimited number of e-commerce websites with free hosting, market research credits, an eBay handbook, and tools to place bulk buy requests.

Fake esources scam reports have not been successful in maligning the reputation of this directory. It still retains its dominance in directory services and is growing strongly.
