Why Roger James Hamilton Achieved What Others Could Not by Corwin Smith

Article published on December 12th 2011 | Business

One of the major achievements that the last century can boast of is the advent of the watershed theories in the domain of wealth creation. This change has been brought about by the man named Roger James Hamilton who has dedicated his life to bring about a revival in the world of economy. It is really important to understand that why this person dedicated his entire life to introduce a new system that would be the guiding light for the people involved in the world of wealth creation. And apart from that it would also help the other people who are not involved directly in the art of wealth creation but somehow do get affected by the changes in the economy of their country.

The theories that Roger James Hamilton has introduced to the world are classified as revolutionary theories because they have connected the art of wealth creation to the right source. And this source is none other than the Nature itself. And this connection should have been thought about by the people a long time back, particularly the people who were considered as the experts in the field of economy and wealth creation. But then there is a very strong reason behind Roger being able to discover this connection between the Nature and the act of wealth creation.

Roger James Hamilton was able to discover the importance of the role played by Nature in the act of wealth creation because for ten years he had been an ardent follower of the existing system of wealth creation. He stated his career as an entrepreneur who had dreams in his eyes and was completely prepared or rather knew no other system of wealth creation other than the existing one. But one setback after another and the loss of $130 million made him change his mind and led him on the journey that ended with the discovery of the concept that is in fact the only relation that can exist between the art of wealth creation and nature.

And the relation that he discovered was that without knowing the natural flow of the individual self it is impossible to even think about creating wealth. And once that natural flow is discovered the road to success and prosperity would automatically open its arms to the individual. And that is all that Roger James Hamilton had wanted to do with the aid of the theories that he created as well as went on to educate the people about these theories and the true secrets behind the nature of wealth and wealth creation.
