Can you really get Jobs in Victoria? by Cameron Gray

Article published on June 19th 2012 | Career

The answer to this question is a straight yes. Getting a job in Victoria is not as difficult as it sounds. Victoria is one of the most populous states in Australia. The capital of the state is Melbourne, which is widely regarded as the hub of cultural and tourism activities. Victoria also shelters some of the most developed industries in the country, which include Finance, Tourism, Hospitality, Service etc. Many of these sectors face a critical skill shortage and are in urgent requirement for people who can take up available jobs in Victoria.

As of now, Victoria is short of nurses, doctors, qualified trades people, skilled workers and many such professionals. An increase in the economic growth and demand for better services has led to this shortage. Another reason is the ageing of the population, which has now become an issue for many industries. The increased number of retirements and the availability of lesser people to replace the professionals has led to a "skills gap"™, which can only be bridged if there is a proper training of the available workers or if skilled migrants take up the jobs in Victoria.

Formalities

If you are a migrant, planning to shift to Victoria for work, make sure your paperwork is in place. Of course, getting a visa and work permit is the first thing that has to be taken care of. If you are able to get a job as soon as you arrive in Victoria, you can get a 457 Long Stay Visa for four years. You can also change your employer within the given industry or the career you have chosen.

If you do not get jobs in Victoria in the industry of your choice, do not despair. You can easily apply for jobs in Tourism and hospitality industries. They are some of the most flourishing sectors here and have a lot to offer to each and every one.
