Skorts for Women by Christine Widman

Article published on May 6th 2012 | Clothing

Skorts have grown increasingly prominent over the past year and offer women another great fashion item for summer. With many stars, including the likes of Kate Moss, brandishing this new kind of short which isn't quite shorts and not quite a skirt.

Skorts are perfect for activity. There are even examples of runners using skorts as active wear for training as well as run marathons, as featured in Runners World magazine. A skort is light and airy, so they breathe rather effectively, also, they are as cozy as great set of gym shorts.

Skorts may offer the sophisticated look of a nice skirt but with the function of a great, comfy pair of shorts.

Numerous tennis merchants have started to see just how comfortable these can be, and there seems to be a completely new line of tennis skorts for women. A Skort for tennis is a smart idea, and one that has been used by lots of professional athletes in tennis for years. It is useful to have the security of a pair of shorts while moving as well as ducking for the ball, Lots of tennis shorts can be extremely small to ensure they do not impede movement, but this is sometimes a disadvantage for fashion. Typically players are required to wear shorts beneath anyway, having a skort makes this challenge completely vanish and includes the shorts and skirt in one.

Cheerleaders have also begun to start using skorts as the conventional outfit does incorporate a skirt, it is very essential for a cheerleader to experience both range of movement but in addition ensure that there is some sort of support beneath and that the apparel stays very tight while they're being thrown in to the air and performing a routine. A skort can provide security without hindering their athleticism.

You will even find a few examples of business skorts in the marketplace, from retailers including LL bean. These enable a woman to look like she is wearing a very elegant business skirt, but having the support of shorts beneath. You shouldn't have to think about hosiery as you are properly protected and comfy in a skort that nobody can tell isn't a skirt.

For a more summer look, you will find everyday skorts which are made by companies including The Gap. These Skorts resemble something comparable to someone sporting a smaller mini skirt on each side with a slight pleat on each leg. They are light and airy, and actually emphasize the style. This style of casual pleated skort does not try to seem closer to shorts or a skirt, it truly is itâ€™s own fashion style. If this style of skort for women is viewed as a trend in summer Next year I would not be surprised one bit. This unique hot fresh fashion style is both equally comfortable and stylish, flaunting a womanâ€™s legs while always keeping her cool during the hot summer sunshine.

If feels like the skort is not going anywhere soon.With a lot of uses both in sports and day to day fashion, skorts for women should go on sprouting up in modern day fashion everywhere.
