There is a huge demand for management professionals in various industries like IT, automobile, hospitality, insurance, FMCG and many more. And to serve this demand in the past few years more than 2000 management institutes came to existence in the country.

Students in India focus upon good quality management education to get a professional management degree. Today, it is not difficult for anyone to search for world class management schools in India. If you're looking to get admission in a reputed management institute in India, you have different options in terms of education and place. Name any city and you'll find at least a management institute there. There is no dearth of good quality management schools in India. A few of them include Indian Institute of Management, Indian School of Business, Xavier's Institute of Management, and Symbiosis Center for Management and Human Resource Development. In fact, the number of applicants from foreign countries is increasing every year. There are increasing numbers of students who are going for the management courses today because these are exceptionally high in demand. It is also because of this reason that many management colleges have opened up in India from where the students can take their courses and find good jobs in the market.

Management courses are designed in such a manner that they instill multi-dimensional and multi-tasking capabilities in the graduates, thereby making them least affected by recession of economy or changes in business environment. For instance, a MBA professional with finance specialization does not inevitably feel the heat when the finance sector experiences stagnation. He can always maintain his career growth by getting into the marketing of the financial services (e.g. marketing of insurance products). Specialization in niche fields such as hospitality management, event management and fashion technology are also available.

A management graduate always has the opportunity to work in any sector, he desires. The pay packages are always attractive and include allowances. Graduates passing out from top management institutes in India have occupied high positions in many corporate houses. Besides building careers in the corporate sector, one can become an entrepreneur, or work in co-operatives and NGOs as the options are simply unlimited.
