Choosing your home VoIP Provider Points to Consider by John Peterson

Article published on June 12th 2012 | Communication

If you're ready to try out VoIP in your home is worth a few points to think about before you choose your VoIP provider. That way you can be sure you choose a package that suits your needs and your family first-up.

Do you already have a broadband connection?

You have home broadband connection to make telephone calls using VoIP technology. It's a good idea to make sure you know whether it is cable (such as Virgin) or ADSL (eg BT), as this may affect your options.

Do you want to make calls from your computer? Or a regular phone?

You can make free PC to PC calls, if you are using a VoIP service provider such as Skype. It may be just right for you, as long as you do not mind that is tied to your computer. You call a person must also have a broadband connection, must also be signed by the provider, and must also be in your computer. This kit is suitable for most people. You can also make calls from your computer to other people's phones, but you will for this. And yet you sit at your computer, of course.

Or you can choose VoIP calls using your existing phone (phone to phone). It just connect your phone to your PC using an adapter that will send you a VoIP provider. This service is not free - you will usually pay a small monthly subscription. What do you usually get in return is unlimited anytime calls to fixed line call plan you have selected the following countries.

Which VoIP service providers are a popular and reliable?

Chances are that broadband telephony, as we all call. VoIP has been around for some time, but it is only recently that he started to become mainstream. So you want to be sure that your provider is reliable and experienced. Take a look at customer reviews and testimonials, as they often say much about the provider.

What is customer service and technical support, how?

See if you can get help and support from a real person 24/7. Do you have to pay for it if you need it?

What do you call the plans of VoIP providers to offer?

Think about the calls for you and your family to do. Are they mainly in UK fixed-line? Do you regularly call other countries? Or are most of your calls to the U.S. and Canada, India, family and friends? Check that the VoIP provider offers call plan that suits your phone habits.

What about calls to your call plan member countries?

There is no need to pay for the call plan, which includes countries that rarely call tone. Check the IP telephony service providers in international call rates. These are usually quite competitive, so you might be better to call the plan for the countries you call most often, and then pay for the call is sometimes not that alone.

What is your budget?

When the phone calls to the traditional way, using a landline, you pay the fixed rent, as well as any call price is usually a minute. This means that people rarely know what their bill will be. IP telephony service providers to act very differently. Once registered, a call plan, you can make unlimited calls to landlines that plan. There are no unpleasant surprises at the expense: you know what your bill will be, as long as you stick to your plan uses. And it helps with the household budget, of course.
