If you are living in the present day world at the present age, you are bound to have a couple of gadgets, which can be charged, by a USB port. The majority of the urban civilization now possesses amenities such as the cellular phone and the mp3 music players, which can be carried around on the go and charged up through a USB port. We do not really spend much of our time at home. What happens if your favorite gadget runs out of charge on an especially long day? You cannot possibly go back home to charge it up again. Thus, the long day seems even longer as you will have to go without listening to your favorite beats on the subway.

The double UP AC/DC dual charger, which can be found on the net, is a great find. This USB charger has a DC plug along with the usual AC plug, which allows you to use it as a car charger as well as during other uses. This neat little model folds in on itself so that it is not sticking out and getting in your way when it is not needed. It has a certain flip out plug for the usual wall plug and has two USB ports. Therefore this one can be used to charge two devices at once â€“ a neat little trick to save the time.

It is absolutely perfect for those who carry their music player and cell phone at the same time or their iPad. Due to its folding nature, you can store it in virtually any place. So save that allowance money and get yourself a good charger so that you never again miss your music on the go! Now a usb hub is also a great device to have. It is cheap and the multiple ports on it allow you to do many things at once.
