Excursions in the Madrid by Frederick Pollard

Article published on July 3rd 2012 | Destinations

Aranjuez

This is a small town whose fame is thanks to the Concierto de Aranjuez done by Joaquin Rodrigo. It is also home to a 17th century palace Palacio Real with the throne hall and porcelain room being the most outstanding features within it. You will also find Casita del Labrador where there is a huge porcelain works and old clocks collection. The gardens are also very beautiful and worth checking out while here.

Chinchon

It is a medieval village that is very romantic. The Plaza Mayor found in it is the major attraction. This beautiful square which is the main one has arcades for its surroundings and it is also where theater performances and bullfights take place. Also in the village there is castle dating back to the 15th century. The most interesting feature of the village and the reason as to why most people make excursions here is the gastronomy. The anisette brandy is also famed and a favorite for many.

Alcala de Henares

It is the old university town of Madrid. It was glorious during the Renaissance epoch but there is still much to enjoy and see within it. The University is of course one of the sites that is a must see and visit. It was founded back in 1498 and still has a lot to offer to the public. Other attractions within the town include the city walls from 15th century, Iglesia Magistral Church, Casa de Cervantes and convent of Bernadas dating back to the 17th century. Pre historic remains as well as remains from the gothic and Roman epochs are also found here.

El Escorial

It is a famous monastery 50 kilometers from Madrid and is an attraction and therefore worth checking out while in the city. It is a piece of architecture that is quite impressive with the austere style and the gigantic measures to it. It is believed to have taken more than 20 years to build. The main chapel, throne hall, museum and pantheon are the most outstanding features within it and those you cannot afford to miss.

A tour through Madrid can be very interesting and you will be amazed at just how much you get to cover within a few hours. Each of the areas within it has something unique to offer and you will therefore find it easy to enjoy the different features making up the wonderful city of Spain.
