If you are staying on the island, taking one or more of the tours is the best way to see all the sights. Whether you have an unlimited budget and are staying in a top class hotel or have opted for one of the popular cheap Isle of Wight hotels, tours do not have to cost too much and are a good way of visiting a number of sights in one go.

There are several companies operating tours on double deck buses with open tops. They take you to places such as the Downs, which is ideal if you enjoy countryside and excellent views; the Needles, which is one of the islands best known landmarks and the tour of Sandown Bay. The tours are guided, so you will be given information on each area you pass through, the history of the attractions and interesting anecdotes about the places you will see. Boat tours are another good way of seeing the island from the sea.

There are several guided walks, which are perfect if you do not mind expending a little energy to see the sights. Walks are available to suit all ages and abilities and most operate seven days a week during the summer months. For tours with a difference, you might want to opt for an air tour, which is a great way to see most of the island in one go.
