There are many places to visit in India. With the rich cultural and historical diversity, one should know what type of a holiday they want to be able to enjoy it. This is the key to getting the best packages from the India tour operators. Some of the best tour locations are explained in this article.

Rajasthan is the first option that comes to mind when we think of a mixed tour in India. There are various places to visit in Rajasthan and it is also a culturally rich state. There is the Ranthambore National Park for the wildlife lovers. It is a place famous for tiger photography. Rajasthan is also the home for the Pink City Jaipur which holds all the forts and palaces. The Hawa Mahal is the main attraction here. Then there is the Jal Mahal known for floating on a lake. This can be found in Jaisalmer. Apart from these, there is the Thar Desert for the evening cultural activities. The traditional women of Rajasthan perform folk dances for the tourists and visitors.

Delhi is a place which is very rich with history, along with surrounding cities. The Taj Mahal is one stunning example of the Mughal Empire and the monuments located in India. Red Fort is another magnificent example of the Mughal rule. Fatehpur Sikhri is a city hosting many more of the Mughal architectural wonders like the Panch Mahal and the Old Fort. Delhi is also known for its spicy Mughal food left by the empire. Many people come here just to taste the food and have a look at the architecture of the Mughal.

For the snow lovers, Kulu Manali is the bets place to visit. The snow here is seasonal and thus, confirmations must be made before booking the tours. There are other hill stations in the surroundings like Shimla, Darjeeling and Nainital. Again, there is Kashmir in the north with snow layered scenic beauties. Srinagar is the home for the shikaras or the boat houses.

For places in the south, Madikeri and Coorg in Karnataka make some of the best places to visit. The weather in these two places is excellent and the area also has coffee plantations. For world heritage sites, Hampi is the place you should visit. This was the glory of India before the invasions of the foreign rulers and homed jewels, gold, silver and diamonds. It is now a mere ruined site after being looted by the Muslim invaders.

There is also Kerala in the south which is the home of many Ayurvedic treatments for illness. The place is also known for its backwaters and Allepey is known as the â€˜Venice of the Eastâ€™ as named by Lord Curzon. This is due to the large number of canals and lagoons formed and boats being the main mode of transport in the town.

Thus, travelling India should include all these places to get the complete experience of it. You can also search for many other places of your interest.
