Mysore is the city of Tipu Sultan and that is the reason why so many people travel to Mysore. The fort of Tipu Sultan and the rose garden there are that of prime importance, which no tourist misses out. With so many places to see in Mysore, people from Chennai come here on weekends. Since the distance between Mysore Chennai is only 404 km and it takes merely seven hours by road, Mysore has become weekend getaway for people of Chennai.

There are many good trains connecting Mysore Chennai like Rajdhani and Shatabdi. However, it is very difficult to get reservation in these trains which are mostly jam packed. During weekdays, it is very easy to get reservations in at least Mysore ChennaiShatabdi but during weekends you will not get even a single seat vacant. You need to get your reservation done at least a month in advance. This is one of the major drawbacks about traveling by train.

On the other hand, if you plan to travel by road, you can start off any time. You can hire a cab but that would come out to be really expensive. Another option is to go by bus. There are some very good buses that connect Mysore Chennai. The local state government run buses are also outstanding. You can even book KSRTC buses for Mysore Chennai online these days. Then there is the option of Red Buses and the Volvos. These are all air conditioned buses which are comfortable and offer good leg space too. There is a separate area at the bottom of the buses to keep your luggage and you can even watch a movie while traveling. These buses are so good that you donâ€™t feel even a moment tiredness which is the reason Mysore Chennai buses are a better option any day than trains.

The same holds true for travelling from Hyderabad to Mumbai also. Though there are many connecting trains from Mumbai Central to Hyderabad, both being metropolitan cities of India offering good educational and career opportunities to people all over India, yet because of lack of confirmed reservation, people prefer travelling by buses. Moreover, the buses are extremely comfortable too and bus booking from Hyderabad to Mumbai is very simple thanks to internet. You can do online bus booking from Hyderabad to Mumbai and there is just no dearth of websites which will plan your entire trip including to and fro journey, making traveling by bus a better idea.
