College is a dream place for a fresh school pass out. The liberty and choices never fail to attract most of their enthusiasm. The students just want to break free in college years and organize parties frequently, which generally make them overindulge. However, to take the party arrangement burden out of the shoulders and to ensure your maximum involvement in your own party, there are really great graduation party ideas to enjoy in college. The first thing that you need to consider is that a college party without alcohol has to be creative. This article will discuss some college party ideas for students who do not want to indulge in alcohol.

The first thing to consider is to prepare a list of activities that participants can do during the party, through an activity called scavenger hunt. In scavenger hunt, the participants have to retrieve certain items with the help of clues. It is best to let the participants use some checkpoints, which will help them in finding the items without getting bored. It is important to have a creative and interesting list of items and graduation party ideas. For example, you may list a task to picture someone sleeping the library and you can even use the landmarks in your college.

Before planning the event, make sure to do it yourself and find out if it can be easily accomplished without any potential danger. Everyone participating in the event should be kept motivated with attractive prices. You can announce prizes for the toppers in the event and have a lucky draw for everyone who completed the event. At the end of the day, you can arrange a fall bonfire. A fall bonfire is one of the best college party ideas that can be completed without alcohol. Always keep in mind to keep non-alcoholic drinks such as apple cider in the party. It is always best to hold the party earlier in the day so that people wonâ€™t miss alcohol in the party. Whatâ€™s more, you can hire a party organizer to keep your friends entertained.
