

Article published on December 10th 2011 | Education

Every student has to go through the process of writing personal statement in medical school application, thorough medical essay an admission officer finds out your skills and abilities to suit the profession or not, on the basis of medical essay you are fully examined by the officer, therefore, you need to be very careful while writing medical essays in personal statement if you are really desperate for the admission in medical school.

The biggest thing which a student has to take care of is that he shouldn't write something which can go against him or prove him ineligible for the medical school admission, so before you go writing the medical essay, you must read the following tips that can help you fetch admission in a medical school of your dreams.

Don't use any cliché terms:

Admission officer has to go through thousands of medical school applications a day, so obviously it's kind of punishment for him reading the same thing again and again. Therefore, try to begin your medical essay with different and unique tone that will grab the attention of the officer. The most common way of starting the medical essay is, "I always wanted to be doctor because". Please try to avoid these kinds of obsolete opening ideas for the admission officer want to hear something new. Why not start your medical essay writing with your personal experiences starts exhibited in the form of anecdote.

Don't be immodest anywhere:

If you will list down your abilities, qualities and skills, the admission officer will get irritated and move on to the next application. You have to avoid being immodest in the free medical essays for it will only destroy your impression. If you really want to show your abilities then you first need to think for those which are suited for the profession and then show it via any personal experience. The indirect way of telling your abilities will impress him for sure leaving no sign of immodesty on his mind.

Don't make it over-crowded with words:

If you think you will impress the admission officer by using high pitched words in the medical essay or using medical terms, no, it will only destroy your impression because he is not a fool. He deals with thousand of application a day, he doesn't want to know how many words you have stored in your vocabulary, instead he want to know why should they consider you for the admission so it is better that you try to convince him in a more subtle manner.

Don't go round and round of the question:

Many students when don't know the answer try to trick the officer by talking about here and there that are bit relevant to the main issue. Again, I would say the admission officer is not a fool, he will instantly find out what's wrong in the essay.

Hence, you should make sure that you have read the above told tips that will help you write a better piece of essay on medical.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/medical-essay-writing-tips.htm> - Article Side

Samcollier - About Author:

Sam Collier is a senior research writer and provide help for a Medical essay and a Medical essay writing. Feel free to contact for any sort of help in this regard.

Article Keywords:

Medical essays, Medical essay, Medical essay writing, Free medical essays, Essay on medical

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!