A Perfect Option - Russian Mail Order Brides by Pamela Smith

Article published on April 6th 2012 | Family

When a woman commits herself to a marriage agency, she is labeled as a mail order bride. Usually, the traditional process of courtship is skipped and the selection process is limited to meeting a set of standards. This is quite different from arranged marriages, as these are usually settled by parents or friends or acquaintances with no prior qualifications. The process of mail order brides involves the foreign man selecting from a list of women. The usual basis for selection is physical attraction. On the part of the female, she has opened herself up to the prospect of meeting a foreign husband whose proposal she will most likely accept.

These women are not "bad people". Please don't hate them, just learn to recognize them and avoid them. Don't think of them as criminals or crooks, they are more like "professional friends". They are just trying to earn a few extra dollars by being friendly to a few men. (Something like a girl that will sit at your table with you if you buy her drinks, but she won't go home with you.) If you bluntly tell that girl, "I'm not buying you drinks just to have you sit with me". She'll get up and leave. The same is true with these online scammer-girls. If, at the first mention of money, you tell her "I'm not here to finance you or support you". She'll go away.

Mexico is an exciting place -- from large "metro" areas like Mexico City to the more upscale tourist areas of Cabo and the Baja Peninsula, this geographic region is varied in many ways. Likewise, the women of Mexico are beautiful, intelligent, and culturally compelling for sure. Mexican women are becoming more and more popular in the "mail order brides" world today because many guys are attracted to their sensual nature -- something that Mexican women tend to get from their cultural background. In Mexico, women are usually more subservient than in other parts of the world (and even more so than in other Latin American countries.)

Second, once you sign up for the site, you can scan their online catalogue. You go through many profiles of women. From the catalogue, you can see their statistical data.

Some have video clips wherein you get a personal perspective of the Filipino ladies that you may be considering. Third, take time to know the Filipino woman first. Do not jump into a plane right away. Most of the time, rushing things can get you into trouble. Chatting, exchanging emails, occasional phone calls can help a lot in getting to know your potential bride. Doing this can benefit the two of you anyway.

Attracted by the power and prestige of the west, many of these ladies are seeking companionship with men who hail from powerful western nations. Koreans are well known for their love of travel and world culture. Just as western men are drawn to the exotic nature of the east, Korean women are drawn to the wealth and wonders of America, Europe, and other more developed parts of the world. Marriage does play a slightly different role in Korea, however. For example, most Korean women do not take the last name of their husband. Interestingly, in order to become legally married in South Korea, a man must be at least 18 but a South Korean girl can be as young as 16.
