Difference Between the Two Major Forms of Rhinoplasty by Julia Roger

Article published on April 9th 2012 | Fitness

The main reason for a person to go for rhinoplasty is to beautify or correct his or her facial features by altering the size and shape of the nose. Other reasons include changing the tip of the nose, altering the angle between nose and the upper lip and also to narrow the nostrils. Nose surgery can also be divided in two groups- Open and Closed. Both these forms of nose surgeries have their share of advantages and disadvantages. One must know in details about each of them to decide which one to opt for finally.

In open surgery, the surgeons have easy access to the cartilage or nose bone, which works as an advantage for them. The doctor has to cut open the columella loosening the skin from the tip of the nose. With this process, they can do the reshaping of the cartilage in the best way. However, a disadvantage of going for open nose surgery is that the patient is left with visible signs of scars since the skin is cut. The doctors go for this process only when there is serious or complicated problem. Moreover, there can be intolerable swelling too if open nose surgery is done.

Closed nose jobs have several advantages as well. The most important one is the absence of scars. Incisions are created, to run within the nose, by the surgeon. It is true that the surgeon is not able o work freely in closed nose surgery but the possibility of reshaping becomes much higher. You must be confident about the doctor who would operate on you since he is the one who is going to decide, which mode to choose for the operation. No distinction can be made in the preparatory measures for both the methods. Sedation is the common process for both of them. Some surgeons may ask to go for local anesthesia only.
