Article published on January 19th 2012 | Government

Each one thinks unique but there are just ideas that are truly so unique and important that it needs to be protected from other people fond of copying things. You would not want this eureka moment to be stolen from you. You need to know how to patent an idea. If you come to know that steps on how to patent an idea are lengthy think of it as a fulfilling job which will yield better results. You need to validate first your idea.

It is really important to know whether there are current studies making use of your idea. In order for it to be patented it has to be unique. A good tool for your search is the World Wide Web since new ideas are something to be proud of you might find it posted in the web. Since an idea per se cannot actually be patented, it has to be put into action. You must materialize the idea you got in order for it to be patented.

Next step is to try to put all these ideas into writing. You need to have a document containing the details of your new invention. It has to contain also necessary things like how you would plan to produce it. This way the jurors will have the thought that you truly have made all these by yourself. After putting all into writing, you need a reputable person to stand as witness. In this case you need your documents notarized for it to be a legal document. Another thing to do is to check whether your idea is really unique or has somebody used it already. Search for inventions that might be similar to your idea.

Sometimes, inventions are not really new things but an exact modification or polishing of an already existing invention. Create a model of your idea afterwards. This shows how your invention would look like. This would also give a way for certain modifications that you would want to create. Then now you are ready to patent your invention. You may have passed the steps on how to patent an idea. You can have a provisional patent which allows you to be the sole owner of a certain invention for a short period of time.

This is a short protection for the ideas that came out from your creative mind. However, after a year you can apply for a renewal which entitles you for a better protection. If you have second thoughts on how to patent an idea it is just right to consult a lawyer. They have the knowledge and the answer for your queries. This way you will also be enlightened with the responsibilities and rights of being a sole owner of a certain invention.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/government-articles/guide-to-how-to-patent-an-idea.htm - Article Side

Evan Nasseri - About Author:
Learn more about a ways to patent an idea. Stop by our site where you can find out all about a patenting ideas and what it can do for you.

Article Keywords:
patent an idea, ways to patent an idea, patenting ideas

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!