If you have ever gone to a battery forum, you will find that there are many questions about the replacement of a new laptop battery. Firstly, choose the right type battery for your laptop

As we all know, battery is the most essential part of a laptop. Usually one laptop only has one type battery. Therefore, if wrong type has been chosen, your laptop will be greatly damaged. There are two ways for you to find out the type of your laptop battery.

â€¢ Look at your old battery, and you will find the type of it there.

â€¢ Search the laptop brand and model number on the internet, and its manufacturer's website is better, so as to find out its battery type.

Secondly, buy a battery with longest life and life span that available for your laptop.

As I said in one previous post, the battery life and life span is quite important to a laptop user, especially one who likes using it out of home or office. Long battery life means that you don't need to charge it often, and long life span means that you don't need to replacement laptop batteries battery again in a short time..

Thirdly, consider about the third-party brands.

Here the third-party brands mean the brands different from the brand of your laptop.. It is a most secure way to choose the same brand, but it is not the best choice. The reasons are as follows:

â€¢ Some batteries made by the third-party have same quality with the original manufacturers' batteries; however, their price is much lower. In fact, you can save a lot of money with no loss, why not?

â€¢ Batteries made by the third-party have longer warranty. Remember: a one year warranty is a must.
