Medical Student Liability Insurance by Amy Fisher

Article published on December 20th 2011 | Health

Nexus Insurance Services, a professional liability insurance broker, just announced that the company has a newly updated website with malpractice insurance resources for medical students. The website now includes information such as how to reduce medical malpractice insurance costs as well as special offers for medical students.

In fact, this web-resource is already available online and it offers students the ability to purchase a policy and print out a certificate of insurance within 10 minutes.

“We are pleased to offer these new assets to medical students,” said Kataf, the supervisor of the Student Liability Insurance website. “It’s important for students to be informed and educated about their options when it comes to malpractice insurance. We want to be the company that students trust to get access to affordable rates and updated industry information.”

Malpractice insurance is important for students because it protects them in case of a lawsuit by a patient. In course of studying in the medical field, students are required to carry medical malpractice insurance which will cover legal costs and settlement payouts. The majority of universities in the U.S. will not accept a student unless he/she has an insurance policy.

“Currently, the high cost of malpractice liability insurance has deterred students from entering the medical field,” said Kataf. “However, our company has relationships with a wide variety of insurance providers which allows us to offer the lowest rates in the industry. We work closely with our clients to ensure that they receive a customized policy at just the right price.”

About Student Liability Insurance

Malpractice insurance will help to pay for an attorney, court charges as well as any damages you may have to pay to the other party that sued you. The majority of medical schools in the U.S. do require that you purchase liability insurance if you are accepted into their school. You can either pay for insurance directly to the school if they offer it (few do) or you can buy your own insurance. Keep in mind that medical malpractice lawsuits are expensive, costing hundreds of thousands, if not millions of dollars. If you do not have this insurance, you are putting your personal finances and career in danger. Just one single lawsuit can end your medical career before it has even really started. You are a student, so we understand that you are on a budget.
